"Smallpox: A Masque," was the name of a unique play produced by the students of William and Mary College in the gymnasium Priday evening. The play was given to celebrate the near approach of the raising of the quarantine, which has held the students close for the past ten days, and was a true representation of comittons existing at the college. It was greeted with a large attendance of students, the town people being, of course, excluded by the quarantiae.

The production was modeled after the old English masques, and was a representation of the reign of smallpox at the college and its cradication. After the rendering of the profague by the Bovil, the representation of the Faculty appeared upon the scene, accompanied by the figures Athletics, Hot Air, Studiousness, Stoth, Fearful, etc. While these characters indulged in characteristic speeches and actions, Rumor appeared and announced the presence of smallpox in the college. This announcement was immediately followed by the appearance of characters representing Panic, Fright and their accompanying Blue Devils.

Faculty thereupon made a hasty exit, and the person of Smallpox appeared and was enthroned in state by Fright and Panic.

REVELS REIGNED.

Then Frolic and his band of revelers indulged in jests and well rendered songs, which were written especially for the occasion, while Medicine, restrained by Precaution and assisted by Fright and panic.

That Petrification Is Indicated.

BRISTOL, VA., February 17.—The remains of Mrs. George A. McCrary, who died in Bristol early last June, have just been removed from Weavers Chapel, five miles south of the city, and reinterred in the cemetery here. Although the body was not in a metallic carket, it was found to be in a remarkably excellent state of preservation. There were no evidences of decomposition, and the features were as perfect as on the day of the lady's death. The face had, however, turned to a brownish color. The hauling of the body five miles over a rough country road made no change in the appearance of the remains. The old sexton at the cemetery here, who has exhumed many bodies, says that the appearance of this one indicated that a state of petrification might have been in progress.

"That service is of over sixty years' growth; it is constituted, in the nair, of educated, trained and self-respecting men, whose honorable service won the esteem of the people who know them best; it has its traditions of loyalty, and it has had, in the successive officers, examplet of unselfish devotion to duty and steadfast adherence to the right.

"Of the 2,555 officers and employes examined, including every officer of the several companies whose individual action or whose order to any subordinate could effect any discrimination, 265 were found to have interests in coal or other corporations or firms, or with individuals. The majority of those interests are in corporations, whose shares are dealt in on the open market. Of those 266 officers and employes, 51 had acquired their interests by purchase. The few remaining officers and employes (fifteen) received gifts of shares or interests in various corporations.

DREADED TO EAT.

A Quaker Couple's Experience

How many persons dread to eat their meals, although actually hungry nearly all the time!

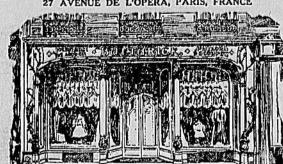

Nature never intended this should be so, for we are given a thing called appetite that should guide us as to what the system needs at any time and can digest. But we get in a hurry, swallow our food very much as we shovel coal into the furnace, and our sense of appetite becomes unnatural and perverted. Then we can the wrong kind of food or cat too much, and there you are—indigestion and its accompanying miseries.
